

Buddy Service

On-site support for MVHR INSTALLATIONS

Whether you are a self-builder, project manager or builder who is considering installing a heat recovery ventilation system but would feel more assured if there was a little expert help close to hand, please ask about our flexible low cost 'Buddy Service'.

One of our experienced fitters could be with you on DAY ONE of your installation to advise and guide you and make sure your ventilation project gets off to a flying start.

You can also call upon our help at any time during the project at an agreed daily rate, which will give you all the flexibility and support you need for a successful installation.

What is the benefit of having a 'Buddy' on site?

Your 'Buddy' will advise you how best to install your system correctly from the outset. Mistakes could be very costly at the time of commissioning and balancing your system (when the ducting is out of view behind your plasterboarding), should you not achieve the necessary designed air flows.

close at hand*

How your “Buddy” will assist you on site

- Talk you through the key points from the “Domestic Ventilation Compliance Guide” as to what is required by Building Regulations to ensure an effective installation
- Walk you through your property with your design in hand to ensure a trouble-free installation
- Help you check your deliveries and talk you through the various components that make up your order
- Advise you of any on-site changes to the design that may need to be made should there be any previously unreported building constraints or potential clashes with other services
- Mark out where the holes for the externals will need to be made within the fabric of your build and supervise you with their core drilling equipment on site
- Demonstrate how best to cut and secure your ducting and show you how to follow your design
- Talk you through some of the “do’s and don’ts” of installing
- If time allows, they will also provide you with as much hands-on support as they can on day one
